What is a Cookie?

Cookies are very small text files that are stored on your computer when you visit some websites. We use cookies to help identify your computer so we can tailor your user experience. You can disable any cookies already stored on your computer, but these may stop our website from functioning properly. You can find out more about cookies by visiting: aboutcookies.org

Cookies we use:

Help us measure how the site is doing with “performance cookies”. These can tell us what pages are popular and help to identify parts of the site that are not working correctly. Track how you have used our site with “targeted cookies” and “advertising cookies”. These are used to show you adverts on third party websites that are likely to be of interest based on what you have looked at on our website.

Google cookies

We use Google Analytics to analyse the use of the site. Google Analytics generates statistical and other information about website use by means of cookies, which are stored on users’ computers. The information generated relating to our website is used to create reports about the use of the website. Google will store and use this information. Google’s privacy policy is available at: <http://www.google.com/policies/privacy/>
